Roanoke was visited by the deepest snowfall of the winter yesterday; and as it warmer than for several days past, there was not as much discomfort to those exposed to the weather as there might otherwise have been. The snow began to fall about 2 o'clock and by daylight it otherwise have been. The snow began to fall about 2 o'clock and by daylight it was an inch or more in depth. It continued to fall with increasing rapidity until about 3 o'clock when at intervals it almost ceased entirely. Those fortunate enough to have sleighs enjoyed themselves considerably in the afternoon and evening, the tinkling of bells being an enlivening feature of city life at that time. Coasting was also indulged in largely by the young people, who had a fine time sliding down the many hillsides about the city. By night the snow was over four inches deep and with increasing coldness of the weather it bade fair to remain in this vicinity several days. The farmers in this vicinity several days. The farmers in this vicinity have been wishing for snow since the cold and freezing weather set in on Sunday, and the ground being frozen to the depth of several inches it is not likely to leave very soon unless a warm spell followed by a heavy rain should set in. No material obstruction to travel by the electric cars was experienced yesterday and there was no delay in the arrivai or departure of Norfolk and Western railroad trains on this account. As noted elsewhere the snow is adding to the sufferings of the poor many, of whom As noted elsewhere the snow is adding to the sufferings of the poor many, of whom are in need of fuel and provisions.
